VOL. LXIII. NO. 40. REDWOOD CITY, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1922 ESTABLISHED 1859

DR. ISAAC GOODSPEED DIES IN SAN MATEO WEDNESDAY

Well Known Pioneer Resident of San Mateo County Succumbs After Brief Illness Wednesday

Dr. Isaac R. Goodspeed, one of the oldest residents of San Mateo county, passed away at Belmont, Thursday, after an illness of a week's duration. Dr. Goodspeed was born in Maine, 91 years ago. He was graduated from Bowdoin College with the degree of M. D. in 1854. He then went to Wisconsin and was married in 1856 and he and his wife who survives him celebrated their 66th anniversary of their wedding last January.

In 1857 the doctor came to California. In 1860 he located in Pescadero and for several years was principal of the Pescadero school and practiced his profession at the same time. In 1875, having moved to San Mateo, he accepted the postmastership of that community and filled the position for ten years, retiring in 1884. While postmaster he continued his medical work. Dr. Goodspeed was a candidate for the State Senate on the Republican ticket in 1882, but was not successful. After leaving the federal service he was for two years division surgeon for the Southern Pacific Company. He was always an ardent Republican and worked in season and out for the success of his ticket.

Dr. Goodspeed was the second oldest member of Redwood City lodge Free and Accepted Masons. He was initiated October 30, 1869, and retained his membership in this lodge until the time of his death.

During the past years Dr. and Mrs. Goodspeed have lived at 48 West Santa Inez street, San Mateo, with their daughter, Mrs. Ella Pye, and last week the aged physician was taken to a sanitorium in Belmont for medical attention. A son of the deceased, Edward Goodspeed, was killed by a street car in Daly City last year.

The funeral will be private and will be held from his late home this morning.

It was interesting to listen to Dr. Goodspeed recount the history of pioneer days in San Mateo county. He had a wonderful nack at narrative and could tell the stories in such a way that one almost lived them with him. He was a big, fine looking man and will be missed by all who have been used to see him going about his daily tasks.

SAN CARLOS ITEMS

The excitement from the post office robbery has prevented our getting tab on the many week-end and holiday visitors to San Carlos the last week. And as we have had to talk post office robbery to post office inspectors, special officers of all kinds and to the Redwood City police who were right on the job and caught the culprit soon after the robbery, and to everybody in San Carlos until we're about ready for the asylum, we won't try to cover the story of the chief excitement which put San Carlos on the map.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Jones of Wilmington, Calif., and their charming daughter, Miss Claire, of the University of California, are guests at the home of Mrs. Jones' sister, Mrs. Rupert C. Johnson, on Elm street.

Mrs. Ida Hoetheling of Berkeley was a holiday guest at the Jack Cowgill home.

While Victor V. Vurpillat was in Los Angees with his wife and baby to enjoy the holidays at the home of his father he ran onto a good proposition in connection with the oil industry in the southern part of the state, which induced him to return immediately; to resign his position in San Francisco, and arrange for the moving of his household effects to the southern city. His bungalow on Walnut street is for rent. Mr. and Mrs. Vurpillat have rendered themselves very popular in San Carlos during their two year's residence here, and every one will be sorry to lose them. We are glad to know of their good fortune.

NEW HIGHWAY PLANS

It looks as though something might be doing in East Side Highway projects again. Mrs. Rosalie Brown and Thomas Hickey of the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors met with the supervisors of San Francisco at the San Francisco City Hall, Wednesday, and a plan of campaign was outlined. San Francisco is waiting for the State Legislature to pass upon a recently adopted Charter amendment which would permit the carrying out of the proposition. Meanwhile San Mateo county is furnishing the only highway that San Francisco can use.

A SURPRISE

Mrs. D. E. Reynolds, 411 Main street, was very agreeably surprised by some twenty-five of her friends and neighbors, headed by her son, Walter Finney and wife, on Saturday evening, Dec. 23rd, it being the seventieth anniversary of her birthday.

Many well-filled baskets of good things to eat were disposed of. Music and games were engaged in until a late hour. All present voted it a very enjoyabe occasion.

WILLIAM MacDONALD PASSES AWAY IN NEW YORK

Parker Townsend has just received word of the passing away of his uncle, William MacDonald, in New York on the 20th of this month, following an illness of six years. MacDonald is very well known in Redwood City, having lived here for a number of years. At the time when the late Senator Stanford was breeding some of the world's most famous race horses on his stock farm at Palo Alto, MacDonald left his home at Livermore and started to work for Charles Marvin, head driver of Stanford's trotting horses. It was while working for Senator Stanford that the deep musical tones of MacDonald's voice attracted the attention of Mrs. Stanford, as she heard him signing at his work in the smithy on her husband's farm. Mrs. Stanford was much interested in having the young blacksmith improve his voice and secured an instructor that he might study music.

MacDonald afterward left the Stanford farm and settled in Menlo Park, where he started a shop in partnership with Edward Taylor, pioneer blacksmith of Menlo. It was while here that he married Elien Lloyd, daughter of John Lloyd of Searsville.

About 1888 he moved to Redwood City and started a shop on Main street on the ground where the Del Monte hotel now stands. Here, in partnership with William Bement, he conducted his business for many years. At this time the Alhambra theatre was opened, just across the street and through William Plump, manager of the theatre and E. T. Thompson, Redwood City's pioneer barber, he met the traveling troop called the Bostonians. He joined the troop and became very well known for his deep bass voice. After traveling all over the world both on the theatrical and concert stages, he finally settled in New York.

The MacDonalds had two sons, one of whom died in Chicago some years ago; the other was in New York at the time of his father's demise.

RECOUNT DROPPED

On motion of J. J. Bullock, counsel for the friends of Frank Roach who had asked for a recount of the votes cast in the recent election, the recount was discontinued Thursday. About one third of the precincts had been gone over and as there was no appreciable difference from the official tally it was decided that no difference would be made in the total recount. Attorneys Ross and Ross represented Mr. Lampkin and the proceedings were held before Judge Hudner of San Benito county.

PESCADERO UNION HIGH SCHOOL PLAY

Before leaving for the Christmas vacation the Pescadero Union High School pupils put on their first dramatic performance before a large audience made up of the Board of Education and the fathers and mothers of the high school pupils. The play, "Every Schoolboy," an allegory in one act written and directed by Mr. Williman, the principal of the high school. The enthusiastic reception given its first performance indicates that the members of the of the cast, which comprised the student body of the high school distinguished themselves in the handling of their respective parts. Altogether the affair was a signal success. Apart from the acting of the individual members of the cast, whose work was highly praised, other special features were the hall decorations in charge of Miss Schroederk, the stage lighting instaled by Verne Rease, and the scenery built by the boys of the Manual Training classes.

WOODSIDE CHIRPS

This week has been filled with Christmas parties, family reunions and celebrations, and, if there is not a special rush for doctor's services, it will have demonstrated that the digestive organs, at least, in this vicinity are in excellent condition.

Sixteen members of his family accepted the hospitality of Fred Highall, and a list of the food consumed would sound like a description of one of the old Saxon banquets in the days of AthelstanceofConningsburg.

On account of the heavy rains of Wednesday night, the Sunday School entertainment was postponed to Thursday night. The tree was most elaborately decorated and the entertainment consisted of songs and recitations by members of the Sunday School followed by a visit of Santa Claus to Mother Goose, in which Mother Goose herself and the characters of her various rhymes appeared in costume. Thereafter, Santa Claus undertook the distribution of gifts from the tree, whereby it was discovered that not one present had been forgotten.

James Huddardt and his sisters, Miss Clara and Miss May Huddardt, spent their Christmas with relatives in Berkeley.

Mrs. Ludwig von Savoye and her son, Raymond, gave a Christmas party to their neighbors on Tuesday evening.

Mrs J. L. Ross, Jr., has issued invitations to a party on Saturday night that promises to put a final test to the already over-strained gustatory functions of the neighborhood.

Mr. O. E. Blackington has been displaying a new Chevrolet sedan, but as to whether Santa Claus left it in his sock, deponent sayeth not.

We are sorry to have to note the severe illness of Samuel Wescott. Mr. Wescott is an old resident here and is very highly regarded and has the best wishes of his many friends for his speedy recovery.

The advance representative of a large and well known firm of bridge builders arrived from the East yesterday and was taken to Dumbarton strait by a committee, consisting of F. H. Drake, R. H. K. Smith, F. K. Towne and others to look over the proposed site for the trans-bay bridge. On the 26th of next month the directors of the Dumbarton Bridge Association will appear before the board of supervisors and ask for a franchise to construct and operate a bridge. As soon as this franchise is granted the engineers will be in a position to start work on the project as plans have already been drawn and specifications are ready.

BASKET BALL NOTES

A picked team of the unlimited and 130-pound basketeers of Sequoia journied to San Francisco Tuesday and played the Olympic Club Varsity. The men from the foggy city surpassed the local lads in experience and weight, and as a result Sequoia came out at the lower end of a twenty-seven to thirteen score.

Wednesday night in the local gym the Sequoia 130's met a team of the same weight from San Francisco, known as the San Francisco Advertising Club. The city team was easily handled and at the end of the first half, Grif sent in his second string of players who finished the game with a score of Sequoia 27 and visitors 12.

The fine new Congregational church was formally opened last night and a large number of members and friends of the organization were present to witness the exercises. At 7:30 Rev. O. H. Stevens, pastor of the church, opened the meeting with prayer. Mr. L. P. Behrens, chairman of the building committee presented the keys of the structure to the trustees of the church. In his presentation speech Mr. Behrens thanked all who had worked and contributed to the success of the undertaking. He explained that the building had been a matter very close to his heart and he hoped that it would be a source of pleasure and service to the community.

Mr. D. W. Williams accepted the keys in behalf of the trustees and the members of the Congregation. In a short, well-chosen address Mr. Williams thanked Mr. Behrens and the members of the building committee for the splendid work they had done. He also spoke in praise of the builder, Mr. Gus Waller, and of the architect, Mr Will H. Toepke, and expressed a wish that every contributor may live a long time and enjoy the new church home.

ABORIGINAL REMAINS FOUND IN NEW SCHOOL GROUNDS

While digging trenches in the course of constructing the new high school buildings being erected in the west side of town, Oscar H. Olson, excavating engineer from the University of California, uncovered what purports to be the remains of two prehistoric inhabitants of the Redwood Highlands district.

The two skeletons were found within a space of eight feet and were only about three feet below the surface. The remains were apparently of great age and considerably decayed, one of the two appeared to be a very old person as the teeth were worn down almost to the jaw bone.

Considerable speculation is rife concerning these Redwoodites of early days and an investigation is under way to determine if the old man was a commuter. Olson persistently denies the report that he also found a dozen or more Navajo bankets with the skeletons.

SUPERVISORS POSTPONE BRIDGE DECISION

With a large and enthusiastic audience of Webb Bridge advocates, the supervisors met last Tuesday to discuss the matter of granting a franchise to Frank E. Webb to build a bridge across the bay from Little Coyote Point, near San Mateo to a point on the east side of the bay near Alvarado.

The board felt that it was advisable to lay the granting of a franchise over for two weeks in order to give the district attorney time to render an opinion on the various phases of the question. As the board felt that the interests of the people should be carefully guarded in the matter, they resolutely refused to give any definite answer to the Webb bridge enthusiasts. John J. McGrath of the Three Cities Chamber of Commerce asked the board to go on record as favoring the bridge, but they refused to do this and would give no answer except that every member of the board was in favor of granting the franchise if the rights of the people were respected.

When asked by Supervisor Hickey if he objected to another toll bridge across the bay, Attorney McCurdy, representing the Webb interests, said he did not but that he wanted the bridge protected against a free bridge built by public capital, for at least ten years.

Webb was present and cited the parelleling of the tracks of the Market Street Railway Co. by the City of San Francisco as an example of what he wanted to avoid.

Other speakers were William Culbert, vice-president of the Well Fargo Nevada National Bank and I. B. Parsons of the Bank of Hayward, both gentlemen speaking in favor of the bridge and urging the board to grant an exclusive franchise.

MRS. W. H. LIPP, SR., DIES

The old tradition in Redwood City that when two old timers answer the sunsmons in this community, a third is sure to follow, was verified last Saturday. Within two weeks two women who were among the very oldest settlers passed away and last Saturday morning Mrs. Katherine Lipp was the third.

Mrs. Lipp was the widow of the late William H. Lipp and had made her home in Redwood City for the past fifty years. She was a native of New York, aged 69 years.

The deceased passed away quite suddenly as only a few days before she had taken a long ride with her son, Will, and had not complained of any illness and so her death came as a surprse and shock to her family.

She leaves to mourn her death, a son, W. H. Lipp, the well known ice man, a daughter, Mrs. Charles Barton of this city and two sisters, Mrs. Richard I. Whelan and Mrs. Sarah Hinkley, both of San Francisco.

The funeral was held from the home of William Lipp, Tuesday afternoon and interment was in the family plot, Union cemetery.

The quarantie on ships at Tampico has been raised.

A Happy New Year To All

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Once again we have come to a parting of the ways. Tomorrow will be the end of 1922. Monday, 1923 will be with us. Regrets as to what 1922 might have been are now of no avil. Resolutions of good intentions for 1923 do not mean very much.

Were we to go into retrospect we could find many things of moment that have transpired during the year just closing. Were we given the clarvoyant powers to forsee the future we would doubtless see many things of even greater moment that will take place in the coming year. Each of us should be thankful that we cannot know what the future holds in store for us. This would be a sorry old world if we knew beforehand just what we might expect. It is good for us to live the best lives we can day by day and let the future take care of itself. With that idea in mind we wish all of our readers and friends a Happy New Year.

We hope that for each one of you 1923 will be the most prosperous and best year you will ever have had. We hope that your every wish will be gratified and that good health may be your portion. HAPPY NEW YEAR.

A CHARTER GOVERNMENT

Two weeks ago the Times-Gazettte made the statement that San Mateo county should take steps to form a charter government. Tuesday, the News-Leader of San Mateo made the same statement. There are obvious reasons why any progressive county should go under this form of government. It allows that county to take care of its expansion without depending on the action of the legislature every four years. California is growing too fast to expect its county officials to secure aid at the end of each four year period. Many things are transpiring every week that require attention and cannot be righted because of the fact that we have no way of altering or changing the laws. With a charter government the governing board could make changes when needed.

If San Mateo county wishes to make the change, now is the time, as the matter must be acted upon by the state legislature which will convene next month.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY

The district attorney of San Mateo county is an extremely hardworking man. He has problems that are not to be found in the office of the average lawyer because he must of necessity give counsel and advice to the Board of Supervisors and to every county officer. He must also prosecute every felony charge brought in his jurisdiction. At present he has five murder trials, a number of felony cases, the drafting of a number of ordinances and the passing on a franchise that may mean a great deal to San Mateo county. There are many phrases to this franchise that should be looked into. We must be sure that the proponents of the project are not backed by capital which wishes to befog a certain issue. We must be sure that they really mean business and will not merely go into a stock jobbing business after a certain amount has been expended. We must be sure there are no jokers which may be allowed to get by.

We do not know what Mr. Swart's attitude on the matter will be, but we hope that he will not act hastily and that he will not only consult all of the authorities but that he will know every point to be passed on. Such an important matter as the building of the bridge cannot be passed on lightly. The law does not give Mr. Swart any assistance in the matter of deputies so he must do all of his work alone. The job is too much for one man. He should be allowed adequate help and the right to call in associates whenever necessity arises.

HARDING ON PROHIBITION

President Warren G. Harding has issued the following statement

"Constitutional prohibition has been adopted by the Nation. It is the supreme law of the land. In plain speaking, there are conditions relating to its enforcement which savor of nation-wide scandal. It is the most demoralizing factor of our public life.

"The day is likely to come when the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed. If the statutory provisions for its enforcement are contrary to deliberate public opinion, which I do not believe, the rigorous and literal enforcement will concentrate public attention on any requisite modification. Such a course conforms with the law and saves the humiliation of our people before the world, and challenges the destructive forces engaged in widespread violation, official corruption and individual demoralization."

The aove are wise words and it were well that the people of the United States should heed them.

CHRISTMAS GUNS

After every Christmas season the youth of the nation stalks about the streets armed with air rifles, "22s," ready to shoot at any feathered creature they see. Our government has seen fit to protect the song birds and the birds which are instrumental in keeping the insect pests of our crops in check. It would be an act of good citizenship to teach the children to respect the law when giving them such presents.

Duck Hunting Reminiscences

By CLAUDE FOX

When the dark-eyed, curly-haired boy who had been selling my ducks saw the bundle of some fifty-odd web feet brought in by us after our cruise with Capt. Hansen and listened to the tales of our experience from the lips of his brother, Frank Granger, and Henry Beeger, it was the last straw, so to speak, that broke the camel's back. He must go on one of those trips, no matter what intervened. He was, as the race horse men say, chafing on the bit, and believe me he had the bit in his teeth coupled with a grim determination to be one of our next party into the marshlands.

Thus far his experience in the duck-hunting line had been confined to paddling along after his older brothers, packing the game, selling the birds and an occasional sneak into the marsh with me when opportunity offered. It was not long before we had another trip planned and it was generally understood between the members of the party that George should be one of us, that is if we could obtain the consent of a certain lady, which was very necessary to the consumation of our project.

Now Mrs. Genochio, George's mother, was a woman who, like all mothers, was wrapped up in the welfare of her children. First, last and all the time, the health, happiness, safety and comfort of her offspring dominated her whole being. I had often thought that if there was ever a woman who lived wholly for those who had been born to her, that woman was George Genochio's mother.

So when Still Sears, George Uhl and myself decided to make a trip on the "Eclipse" and had practically agreed to take George along, we found that we had rather a delicate matter to handle, but Mrs. Genochio was a good, level-headed woman, one who did not wish to deprive her children of any pleasure, and so when the matter was broached to her, together with a little persuasion on the part of the older brothers of George, she gave her consent, but not before I had been very solemnly warned to be sure and bring her boy home safely.

So we sailed away again under command of Capt. Andy Hansen.

If ever there was a happy kid this side of the Rocky Mountains, it was George Genochio. To go out down the bay for two days and nights with older hunters was an event in his life that would be by him not soon forgotten.

As we sailed away down Long Reach and anchored in the North Channel of the middle grounds, little did any of us dream that the "dark angel" was even then hovering about the masthead, but such was the fact. It was Capt. Hansen's last trip. He was not a well man when we left, and had been suffering for some days with a bad cold, but he insisted on going, after the arrangements had been made. When we returned he was no better and within a short time pneumonia developed and he passed on to the duck-hunting boys who had gone before.

When we came to anchor a consultaton was held to determine as to where we should hunt on the morrow. I had promsed Mrs. Genochio that nothing should happen to George, but I only had a small scull boat, suitable for one and could not take him with me. George Uhl and Still Sears were both experienced hunters and I knew they could be depended on to look out for the kid.

The tide was not right for hunting out at the patch of weeds and there had but recently been a heavy rain, which scattered the ducks, as it invariably does. After talking the matter over it was decided that I should scull through Corkscrew creek in the morning and hunt the Smith Creek section; Geo. Uhle was to scull the Seal creek and those tributaries branching off of West Point slough, while Still Sears would hunt First slough after having first placed our kid partner out over decoys in the Elbow mud flats, and then pick him up on his way back to the sloop in the afternoon.

Our arrangements had been made with a view of giving George a good shoot over his decoys asd with myself sculling the north marsh and George Uhl and Still in the creeks to the southward we thought our plans would work out all right, but as I have said a previous heavy rain had scattered the ducks to such an extent that but few were to be found. It has always been my contention, and one which I still cling to, that in order to have good wild duck shooting on the bay and marshes here, we require cold weather. Under such conditions the birds pass back and forth from the bay to the lakes of the Spring Valley Company and obtain all the fresh water they desire, but let a heavy rain fall and they are off for the San Joaquin and any place where puddling shallow ponds can be found.

The boys were off at the first streak of dayight next morning while I waited for more light before negotiating Corkscrew creek with its many windings. When the tide started strong on the flood I was off and away after seeing that Capt. Hansen was comfortable before leaving.

I had sculled the creek where Sheriff Green lost his life many times and nearly always managed to pick up a nice bunch of birds but on this particular day I met with bitter disappointment so far as that particular slough was concerned. It is a good three miles before you reach Smith's creek; and during that trip I saw but one small flock of teal and they were so wild that I could do nothing with them.

Turning out toward the South Belmont house of the Morgan Oyster Company I sculled along slowly until I reached Sutton's creek. This tributary runs off to the southward and then heads in a general easterly direction out toward the bay shore. It was a deep creek and one of the best localities on the marsh for ducks. Not a feather could I find and as the noon whistels blew I found myself empty handed, not having fired a shot, half way up Sutton's and not a bird in sight. If ever I was thoroughly disgusted with duck hunting it was just about then.

But it is that uncertainty about scull boat hunting that tends to make it so interesting. You never know just what is going to occur next. I was drifting along listlessly, eating my lunch and keeping the little boat headed eastward. Suddenly I noticed a flock of about a dozen sprig coming directly toward me from the bay. When three hundred yards away they quickly set their wings, made a dart downward and a short circle and passed out of my sight just over the top of the tulles.

Now I knew Sutton's creek as I know the streets of Redwood City, and was fully aware that those sprig had decoyed to others in a hot pond on top of the marsh just around the next turn. How to get a shot at them was what was bothering me most. The tide was but half up and I knew it would be necessary to go up a small gutter to my left in order to get near enough to make a kill.

If ever a duck hunter done some fast thinking I was that lad. Sculling quickly up the creek unti I got opposite the gutter I pushed the boat into the mud, got out carefully, gun in hand and walked up through the mud until the mouth of the gutter was reached. It was quite deep with a fairy hard bottom. Stooping over and measuring every step so as not to make any noise I started up toward a point which I was sure would bring me within range of the hot pond. After resting a few moments I got a good footing in the soft bank and raised up carefully. What I saw made a complete change in me. From a disgusted duck hunter I was transformed into just the opposite. Not over twenty-five yards away was the hot pond and siting sound asleep on its edge, in a semi-circle was about 18 or 20 sprig. I could not of course expect to get them all as they were not lined up, but I got aim in a jiffy on the thickest part of them, whistled and as they raised their heads let go both barrels. Nine of those great big northern birds never started for the bay, and after the bitter disappointing hunt of the morning I was more than elated.

With the esvening tide I skirted the bay shore and reached the sloop just after the other boys had arrived. I had picked up two teal and a widgeon out in the bay, so I had an even dozen.

The other boys had about the same reports to make as I did. Birds were scarce every where. Still Sears had only secured three, George Uhl five, and the kid who had patiently sat up on a mud flat all day with his decoys where the tide left him had knockd over seven spooneys, but he had obtained more enjoyment out of that trip than all the rest of us together.

We were destined for further disappointment for the next morning Capt. Hansen was worse and after a short hunt, we returned to the sloop hoisted the main sail and headed for home. The "Eclipse" never went out again under command of her skipper, for we laid his mortal remains away shortly after, and all that is now left to those who are living are pleasant memories.

More Than a Half Billion Dollars Annually from California's Natural Resources

California has a large area in the Sierra Nevadas, much of it more than a mile above the sea. The towering mountains are vast storehouses of mineral wealth. Their streams provide enormous power.

On their slopes stand billions of feet of timber and some of the trees are older than any other living thing.

And dotted over California's surface are oil wells which pour out millions of barrels of "black gold" every month. Such is the natural wealth of this great Commonwealth.

California's Principal Minerals

In the days of '49 California became known as the "Golden State." She still leads in the production of gold, which is produced in thirty-two counties and exists in others. Last year the production of gold in California reached $15,800,000.

But now many other minerals take their place with gold as sources of the State's wealth. More than one-fourth of the nation's output of petroleum last year came from California. Its value was $182,400,000.

More plebeian, but contributing largely to our wealth, were brick, cement, building stone and crushed rock, which aggregated $27,000,000.

And in lesser quantities we find that California's mineral production included also silver, copper, lead, zinc, quicksilver, platinum, natural gas, magnesite, salines, including borax, potash, salt and soda, and miscellaneous industrial minerals. California has the largest iron ore deposits west of the Missouri River.

The total value of all these products taken from California's natural storehouses last year was $244,856,910.

Valuable Timber Resources

To the great wealth of minerals which California's bounty provides must be added $90,000,000 for the lumber cut annually.

Great forests of white, yellow and sugar pine and fir sweep southward from the northern boundaries of the State to the San Jacinto Range. In the Coast Range are great forests of redwood.

California contains twenty National Forests, whose total area is more than 24,000,000 acres.

It is estimated that these National Forests contain 120,000,000,000 board feet of standing timber, mostly pine, redwood, fir and cedar. The value of this timber is $250,000,000.

Water Power

And finally are tremendous and valuable resources in water power, partly developed and partly undeveloped.

It is estimated that there is available about 5,000,000 horsepower in California. This figure includes only the power which is now looked upon as practical—power which may be obtained by the type of plants which is now being installed.

About 1,250,000 horsepower has already been developed in the State and plans are now under way for the development of large amounts of additional power.

How You Can Serve Your State

This advertisement is one of a series of three, the first devoted to telling of California's agricultural wealth, the second to California's natural resources, and the third to California's industries. These are facts of which you can well be proud.

Beautiful booklets and descriptive literature about California have been prepared by such organizations as Californians, Inc., San Francisco, by the All-Year Club of Southern California, Los Angeles, and by the San Diego-California Club, San Diego.

There are thousands of people in other states who have no conception of California's greatness. Some of them are your friends. Help us tell them.

If you will send to the Southern Pacific Company a list of the names and addresses of your friends, living elsewhere, whom you would like to have receive this series of advertisements as well as the California literature prepared by these organizations, which have for their sole purpose the advertising of California, we will see that your friends get this California literature.

Send Your List Today

Your friends will be glad to know these facts. The list of names you send us will be turned over to your own Chamber of Commerce or other civic organization, and literature will be sent telling them interesting facts about your own particular community.

Simply attach your list to the coupon below and send it to us—no obligation on your part. Do it today before you forget. In this way you will help to spread this message of California's greatness throughout the land and perform a valuable service not only to your State but to yourself and to your community.
